NEWBOOKS

Genocide at the Millennium: A Critical Bibliographic Review, Vol. 5

CallNo : 05SB009

Law, history, and political science are among the perspectives contributors bring to their 10 critical essays and annotated bibliographies. Case studies come from the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda. Other topics include the role of non-governmental organizations in prevention, intervention, and punishment from the 1980s to the early 2000s; the international legal prohibition of genocide coming of age; and the establishment of the International Criminal Court.

New Directions in Restorative Justice : Issues, Practice, Evaluation

CallNo : 06ME007

Based on papers from the 6th International Conference on Restorative Justice at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver in 2003, the essays in this book discuss the relatively new topic of restorative justice, a substitute for incarceration in which situations are returned to a restored state after the crime. Elliott (criminology, Simon Fraser University, Canada) and Gordon (criminology, Simon Fraser University, Canada) look at the subject in terms of theory, practice, and research. The 15 essays by international contributors examine topics concerning restorative justice and youth, Aboriginal justice, gender, victimization, elder abuse, and insurance companies. The last section covers evaluating restorative justice in different cases, such as in serious crime and with juvenile offenders. Essays have individual bibliographies.

CONFERENCE ALERTS

Human Rights Fieldwork - Principles, Strategies and Skills (BIR06)

Location: National University of Ireland, Maynooth, Ireland + Field Exercise at the Irish Defence Forces training facility at Coolmoney Camp, Glen of Imaal, County Wicklow.

Delivery: Saturday 28th October - Sunday 5th November 2006

Priority to applications before: 1 August 2006.

Objective

This Training Programme will:

- Explore the principles underpinning effective human rights fieldwork; and
- Enhance the skills of participants needed to carry this out safely before, during or after armed conflict.

The emphasis is on ensuring that human rights fieldwork is relevant, effective, sustainable, participatory and accountable. The programme is designed to raise participants' self-awareness in terms of behaviour, attitudes and values in undertaking international human rights fieldwork.

Core principles include the need for genuine partnership with local human rights defenders - both state and non-state. Participants are facilitated in approaching their own development as an on-going process. As a successful applicant you will be part of a multinational, multicultural group with a range of relevant skills and experience.

Participants

Reflecting the multi-disciplinary nature of human rights fieldwork and the training programme, applications are invited from:

- Human rights specialists who wish to adapt pre-existing knowledge of international human rights framework to the context of human rights fieldwork; and from
- Experienced field practitioners who wish to reflect on their work and enhance their skills with a human rights based perspective, including military or civilian police/peacekeepers, development and humanitarian aid practitioners etc.

Typically, participants have worked for, or plan to work for, international field missions of the UN, OSCE, the European Union or the African Union or non-governmental sector. In 2005 for example, the programme included participants from developed and developing countries on all continents as well as from conflict contexts such as Sierre Leone, Sudan, DR Congo, Iraq and Aceh. Participants profiles ranged from military, government, NGOs and EU officials to UN staff from OCHA, UNHCR, OHCHR and UNDP.

Participants will generally have a relevant degree/training and a minimum of three years relevant experience. However, diverse skills of applicants will be taken into account so as to ensure an optimum mix of disciplines and profiles. The course will be conducted in English and places are limited to thirty.
